A New Era for Danish Modern Metal

Introduction: A Void in the Danish Metal Scene boasts a proud metal tradition, yet the scene has lacked the atmospheric heaviness that defines the international modern metal sound. That changes now. Cursed Into Oblivion has emerged from Vejle with a clear mission: To introduce Denmark to a soundscape and an expression the nation has been needing.

The Sound: Innovation Meets Brutality
The band operates in a boundless territory between modern deathcore and metalcore, known for its heavy, dissonant atmosphere and complex rhythmics. But Cursed Into Oblivion does not stop there. By integrating elements of electronic music and theatrical devices, the band creates its own unique sonic landscape. Cursed Into Oblivion is not here to participate, but to set a new standard for what Danish metal can hold in terms of technical prowess and originality.

Status: The Future is Now
With LIFE firmly in the rearview mirror, Cursed Into Oblivion is already executing the next phase. The band is currently working intensively on new material designed to elevate their vision to an even higher standard. The live potential is not just an ambition; it is proven. The band's debut concert on home turf in Vejle was delivered to a sold-out venue supporting NECKBREAKKER. That was the starting shot, and Cursed Into Oblivion has only just begun.
